New book Love, Tupelo to benefit the Downtown Tupelo Main Street Association

Proceeds from every book will continue to help revitalize the iconic, Southern city.

Lafayette, LA — Corvus Press announced today that its upcoming book Love, Tupelo will do much more than spread excitement about Tupelo, Mississippi as an incredible travel destination. The book will support the continued growth of Tupelo by donating 5% of proceeds to the Downtown Tupelo Main Street Association.

“At Corvus we want to make books that inspire action,” said Publisher Jeremy Broussard. “Each of our books support a nonprofit chosen by the author. In Love, Tupelo, readers will get an in-depth, behind the scenes tour of this intriguing community and — at the same time — they will literally help the people of Tupelo preserve the culture, history, music, festivals and all of the things that make this city a must-see destination.”

The organization was chosen by Jane V. Blunschi, author of Love, Tupelo and one of the city's biggest fans. “I fell in love with this city before I ever stepped foot in town,” Blunschi said. “There are countless interesting things to experience and the people are amazingly dedicated to preserving it all. I’m so glad the book can play a small role in their efforts by supporting the Downtown Tupelo Main Street Association.”

Love, Tupelo gives readers a captivating, experiential tour of the city. Blunschi weaves her first-hand accounts of Tupelo's unique places, festival revelry, musical roots and charming personalities into the ultimate Tupelo road trip guide. Combined with large format, full-color photography, readers feel like they're experiencing the community first-hand — followed by quick and easy tips to make their own road trip to Tupelo.
